Dear Jack N' Jill,

Thank you for your ongoing support of The Guardian Weekly, we hope you're continuing to enjoy your subscription.

As you probably know, the cover price of The Guardian Weekly went up on 12 October 2018. Putting up our price is not something we do lightly; we believe that this can help us secure the future of The Guardian Weekly for years to come.

This change means that your subscription price will change at your next payment date (see details below). Don't forget that subscribing is still the best way to enjoy your Guardian Weekly as you are still paying less than you would at the newsstand and helping to support our award-winning journalism, written as always, from our uniquely independent perspective.

You might have noticed that there's now more to your Guardian Weekly: we're printing 64 pages instead of the previous 48 and they are filled with more in-depth international news, comment and debate, plus beautiful images.

As well as that increased coverage, your subscription to a bigger and better Guardian Weekly gives you:

- Free delivery to your door, wherever you are in the world
- A weekly email newsletter from our Editor, containing a more personal take on the news. If you have not signed up yet, please log in to your online account and update your preferences

Your new price will take effect at your next payment date, on or around 24/03/2019, and your new payment amount will be EUR 61.30 quarterly. You don't need to take any further action as this change will be done automatically.

Thank you for your ongoing support of The Guardian Weekly,

With best wishes,

Mylene Sylvestre
